

1979

MARYLAND MARATHON RESULTS

Strange events of the Seventh Maryland Marathon

By PHIL JACKMAN
Evening Sunpapers Sports Writer

The guy who led the race for about 21 miles ended up being disqualified.

The guy who won it? Well, if he had his druthers, he wouldn't even have been here.

These were just a couple of the weird things that happened yesterday as they staged Maryland Marathon VII amid semi-frigid temperatures (34-39) and blustery winds.

"I look at some of the times that have been run here and I can't believe it," said winner Jeff Foster, a 23-year-old salesman at an Athlete's Foot shoe store in Pittsburgh.

